FOREWORD

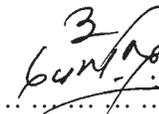

The new Constitution of Federal Democratic Republic of Nepal 2015 recognizes the country's diversity with multi-ethnic, multi-lingual, multi-religious, multi-cultural, and diverse regional characteristics and emphasizes protection and promotion of social and cultural solidarity, tolerance, harmony, and unity in diversity. With this constitutional mandate, the government takes precedence in Nepal's pursuit of inclusive development. The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development endeavors to eradicate poverty in all its manifestations through expansion of social protection measures and advancement of inclusive development, which Nepal has adeptly amalgamated into its national development frameworks.

To grasp this social and cultural diversity, it is essential to have information on caste, ethnicity, and mother tongue. The Nepal Population and Housing Census (NPHC) 2021 reveals that Nepal's population is classified into 125 languages as mother tongues. The NPHC 2021 marks the eighth series since the beginning of modern census in 1952/54. Each census documented a different number of languages, showing a notable rise from 54 groups in 1952/54 to 125 in 2021. On this backdrop, National Foundation for Development of Indigenous Nationalities (NFDIN) recognized the urgent need to geographically map population (number of speakers) by language groups, necessitating a thorough assessment of their scale and distribution. As a result, we now have this Nepal Atlas: Language Groups. This work has been accomplished thanks to the dedicated efforts of the study team members.

This Atlas offers district-level information on 125 language groups in tables and Geographic Information System (GIS) plots, organized by 753 local units. This allows policy makers, planners, academicians, researchers, and students to easily access various information related to language groups in a single book. This distribution pattern of language groups will be useful as a valuable foundation for planning and programs aimed at affirmative action for Adivasi-Janajatis, Dalits, and other highly marginalized communities.

I would like to express my gratitude to Prof. Dr. Yogendra B. Gurung for his valuable time for interpretation of language data and for his guidance on data analysis and map preparation. I also extend my sincere thanks to Dr. Bidhya Shrestha for analyzing data and preparing tables, to Mr. Sher Bahadur Gurung for preparing maps, and to Dr. Tara Mani Rai for guidance as a linguistic expert.

I extend my sincere thanks to Dr. Padma Prasad Khatiwada, a demographer, for peer reviewing this document and providing valuable comments and feedback. I also would like to thank Mahesh Raj Maharjan for copy-editing. Lastly, I would like to express gratitude to the officials of the Population Section at the National Statistics Office and the Central Department of Population Studies at TU for their support in completing this task.

1. INTRODUCTION

Language is a human system of communication for expressing thoughts, feelings, and emotions that have power to assert voices and foster social transformation. Language is a vehicle of knowledge that is enhanced through education. Therefore, language and education are related. Whereas the aim of language is to communicate, which is enhanced through knowledge, the aim of education is to impart knowledge especially to the younger generation by using language as the means of communication. Nepali language is the lingua franca and medium of instruction in schools. In this context, Nepal has enormous experience of marginalization of people whose mother tongues are different from Nepali. Realizing this fact, the Constitution guarantees the right to education in one's mother tongue. Consequently, the National Education Policy 2076 B.S. (2018) acknowledges the importance of mother tongue-based education, particularly at the basic level.

The Constitution of Nepal 2015 has recognized all the languages spoken in the country as “languages of the nation”. The inhabitants of Nepal’s diverse ecological zones ranging from high mountains to mid-hills and lowland Tarai exhibit distinct linguistic characteristics. People in the mountain and hill areas speak various languages influenced by caste, ethnicity, and geographic identity, while those in the Tarai speak altogether different languages. Additionally, the Tarai region showcases horizontal diversity, with residents in its various parts (e.g., eastern, central, western, and mid- to far-western) speaking different regional languages that are recognized as cross-border languages (Yadava, 2014), overlapping with neighboring Indian states of Sikkim, West Bengal, Bihar, Uttar Pradesh, and Uttaranchal. This linguistic diversity is vividly illustrated in the “linguistic map” presented at the beginning, highlighting the major languages recorded in the 2021 census.

Languages spoken in Nepal can be classified in a number of ways: first, based on the languages spoken by the people and, second, by genealogical classification. Based on the languages spoken, there are three types of languages: Nepali, the lingua franca; indigenous languages; and regional languages. Nepali is commonly spoken by most of the population throughout the country. Indigenous languages are caste/ethnic group-specific languages spoken mostly by indigenous peoples of the country. Regional languages are region-specific languages spoken in different parts, from eastern to far-western part of the Tarai, such as Maithili, Bhojpuri, Bajjika, Awadhi and Rana Tharu. The genealogical classification includes Indo-European, Sino-Tibetan, Dravidian, Austro-Asian, and other families.

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development aims to eradicate poverty in all its forms by expanding social protection for everyone and promoting inclusive development.¹ Nepal has incorporated the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) into its national development frameworks. As a result, the country is heading towards achieving inclusive and robust economic growth while ensuring social justice and empowerment for all its citizens, both economically and socially (NPC, 2017). As inclusive development is a key aspect of the Constitution of Nepal, addressing diversity and inclusion of different linguistic groups is at the forefront of inclusive development in the country. Such diversity is acknowledged as the key social characteristic by the government and various development sectors for policy making. This reality highlights the need to map speaker population groups in geographical settings, encompassing both their size and distribution.

2. METHODOLOGY AND OUTPUT

This Atlas is mainly based on Geographic Information System (GIS), a system designed to capture, store, manipulate, analyze, manage, and present all types of geographical data, which has an attractive and useful capability to visualize large amounts of information interactively into the map. There is a tradition in Nepal of mapping population based on sub-national units such as districts, palikas, or wards (Gurung, Gurung & Chidi, 2007; Chapagain et al., 2014). The present work is an attempt to produce an atlas based on languages by using quality GIS maps. It visualizes distribution and concentration of the size of speaker populations of Nepal based on 124 languages recorded by NPHC 2021 in terms of local administrative unit, that is urban/rural municipality (palika, in Nepali). Expectedly, language data plotting into 753 rural and urban municipalities would have more precision in visualizing their spatial distribution than plotting into 75 districts that was previously done by Gurung, Gurung and Chidi (2007). The output of this work informs research audiences (policy makers, researchers, students, social workers, and the state) for gaining visual-based linguistic ideas into their day-to-day works.

2.1 Preparation of GIS database and atlas

The digital database contains both spatial and non-spatial data concerning the provinces, districts, and local units of Nepal. The administrative boundaries used in the maps were adopted from the Survey Department, Ministry of Land Management, Government of Nepal (DOS, 2020). The spatial data include the following:

- Administrative boundary (local, provincial, ecological)
- Drainage characteristics (major streams)
- Accessibility (major roads)
- Height information (contour lines)

For the mapping process, open source GIS software was used in this Atlas, which follows the following procedures:

- Required map data such as administrative boundary, road, river, and altitude were collected and entered into the computer through digitizing (preparing spatial digital database) using ArcGIS software.
- Spatial data of provinces, districts, and local units were integrated into the GIS database. Description, annotation, and all field-collected attribute data were included in the feature attribute table.
- A standard coding system was used for mapping provinces, districts, and local units, and for integrating spatial data with attribute data. Each data element (settlement, rural municipality/municipality, district, and province) was assigned a unique code.

Based on the above technical procedure, a comprehensive digital database was developed that included both spatial and non-spatial data related to provinces, districts, and local units. Tables for each of the 124 language groups were prepared and illustrated along with maps. Preparation of the atlas involved the use of spatial data from the Survey Department and population data from National Statistics Office (NSO), utilizing GIS. The concentration of population statistics was calculated using GIS tools such as Dot Density and classification to create maps visualizing population statistics, along with other features such as major roads, rivers, and administrative boundaries.

2.2 Language data

Since the first modern population census of Nepal in 1952/54, language data have been collected. The census collected language data as two types: 'mother tongue' and 'other language.' The mother tongue was defined as "the language one learns first at home", or "the language which the mother speaks at home with other family members if an infant has not learnt and started speaking the language". This definition was continued until 1991, and it was expanded since the 2001 census and continues to the current census. The definition of mother tongue used by the current census is:

the language the respondents learnt to use at first at home. It is the language a child learns first from his grandparents, parents, or any other members of his family, or a child learns from his/her caretakers For the children who have not started speaking the language, the language of an infant's parents is his mother tongue. (CBS, 2021, p. 76).

The 2021 census recorded three types of language data: heritage language, mother tongue, and second language. Heritage language is an ancestral language with a status irrespective of whether it is currently spoken or not (CBS, 2021). The second language is the language spoken by the people as "other" than mother tongue. This Atlas utilizes only the "mother language" data, which numbers 124 as recorded by the 2021 census.

2.3 Analytical framework

This Atlas utilizes population (language speakers) data disaggregated by 124 language groups recorded by NPHC 2021 (NSO, 2021). The attribute data essentially covers the distribution of each language group according to 753 local units (palikas) in 77 districts. The GIS plotting adheres to the 753 local units, while tables for each of the 124 language groups are arranged according to 77 districts due to the fact that accommodating data tables for 753 local units are not possible in the report. Tables and maps include only language groups with speakers of 10 or higher.

The level and trend in reporting the number of languages and the size of language speakers are analyzed in the descriptive part in order to inform status and change. Languages are also analyzed according to genealogical classification, namely Indo-European, Sino-Tibetan, Austro-Asian, Dravidian, and Others. Kusunda is separately identified because it is an isolated language, and its associated language has not been identified.

In addition, linguistic diversity index (LDI) is also examined in this Atlas to inform the level of diversity in language in the country by districts and provinces. A lower value of LDI indicates more homogeneity and a higher value indicates more heterogeneity in languages for a district or province.

3. LANGUAGES IN NEPAL

3.1 Trend in language reporting

The first modern census of Nepal 1952/54 recorded 54 mother tongues (Figure 1). The number of languages decreased in the two subsequent censuses, to 36 in 1961 and to 17 in 1971. However, the number started to increase since 1991 (to 31), after the restoration of democracy in the country. This number increased to 92 in 2001 and reached 123 in 2011 and 124 in 2021. This shows a sharp increase after 1991, but the increment was only of one language between the two censuses of 2011 and 2021. This is because the 2021 census recorded 13 more new languages², and 10 foreign languages were merged into “Other” category³.

Since the restoration of democracy in 1991, the state has become more democratic, and people have enjoyed more democratic environment in the country. As a result, people increasingly reported their identities, including linguistic identity. With the trend of increasing identity politics, mainly among indigenous nationalities, many languages are yet to be recognized by the state, and by this interpretation, the number of languages may increase in future censuses.

Nepal has four language families according to genealogical classification. First is the Indo-European, a sub-branch of which is Indo-Aryan family in the case of Nepal. Second is the Sino-Tibetan, a branch of which is Tibeto-Burman in the case of Nepal. Third is Austro-Asiatic, and the last one is Dravidian (Table A and Table D). In addition, there are two more categories displayed in the Table, ‘Other’ and ‘Not stated’. ‘Other’ includes ‘sign language’, Kusunda, and others. Kusunda is an isolated language that is not related to any other language either in terms of shared ancestry (genealogically) or shared features (lexically, grammatically, or phonologically) (Watters, 2005). Kusunda language speakers number only 23 according to the 2021 census, and it is a nearly extinct group.

The number of languages reported before the 1991 census is considerably low. Since 1991, however, the number steadily increased (Table A). The Indo-European family is consistently overwhelming in terms of speakers, at around 80 percent, with increasing trend in all censuses since 1991. The share of Indo-European language speakers was 79.5 percent in 1991, which reached 83.1 percent in 2021. During the last three decades, the percentage increase in Indo-European speakers is 64.8. Sino-Tibetan family comes in the second position, which holds a share of around 17 percent, with 16.8 percent in 1991 and 16.6 percent in 2021. The percentage increase in Sino-Tibetan family speakers from 1991 to 2021 is 56.1. The share of population speaking Austro-Asiatic and Dravidian languages is minimal; however, they are significant in number. The 2021 census recorded 55,916 speakers of Austro-Asiatic and 39,877 speakers of Dravidian language. Between 1991 and 2021, the percentage increase of Austro-Asiatic family is considerable (67.8%), and it is considerably high for Dravidian (162.8%). Such a high increment of Dravidian is by and large due to the fact that Oraon/Kudukh language has been recorded only in the 2021 census, which has a significant number of speakers (38,873) (see Table D).

Looking at the top ten language groups in terms of proportion share of speakers over the past four censuses (1991–2021), there are 14 groups listed in Table B. Five groups, namely Nepali, Maithili, Bhojpuri, Tharu, and Tamang, are consistently at top five in all four censuses. Among them, Tamang is the only language from the Sino-Tibetan family; other four belong to Indo-European language family. In addition to these five language groups, Newari (Nepalbhasha), Magar, and Avadhi also have been consistently within the top ten rank in all four censuses.

The proportion share of speakers of some language groups have changed over the years. Rai-Kirati and Limbu (Yakthung) language were at top ten in 1991, but the position of Rai-Kirati demoted to the 16th position and that of Limbu to the 12th position in 2021. Gurung language was at the 10th position in 2001, which demoted to the 13th position in 2021. On the other hand, Bajjika and Doteli language entered the top ten position since 2011. Bajjika has the 6th position and the Doteli language has the 10th position in 2021. Similarly, Urdu also came to the 10th position in 2011, but it is 11th in 2021.

Change in the position of language groups in terms of proportion share of speakers is also due to the change in reporting. Increasing number of language groups in every census is also the result of people searching new identities and their establishment. The best examples are Rai-Kirati and Magar languages. Making and adding new languages among Rai-Kirati groups is continuous over the census periods. There are now 25 groups that belong to Rai-Kirati group. If these 25 groups are included into a single group, it would be 2 percent and would hold the 10th position. Similarly, Magar was a single language group in previous censuses. However, in 2021 it differentiated into two different languages: Magar Dhut and Magar Kham.

3.2 Linguistic diversity in Nepal, 2021

In order to examine the level of diversity in language, linguistic diversity index (LDI) is computed following Greenberg's (1956) approach. The mother tongue data from two censuses (2011 and 2021) are used to calculate LDI. LDI is calculated using the following formula:

$$A = 1 - \sum(P_i)^2$$

where P_i is the proportion of the population speaking a particular language, and the value of i ranges from 1 to n , where n is the total number of languages.

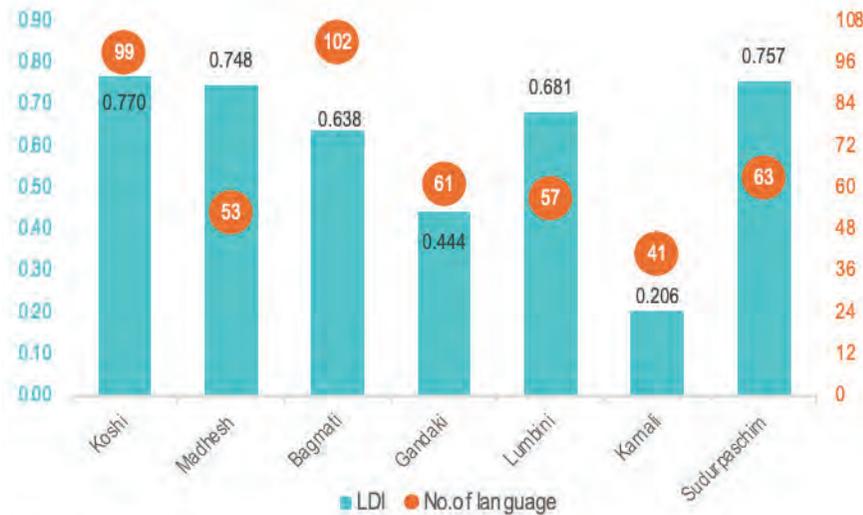

LDI calculates the value by subtracting the sum of squares from 1. The resulting value ranges from 0 to 1, "0" indicating no diversity or everyone in a territory speak the same language, and "1" indicating total diversity or there are no two people speaking the same language (mother tongue). The index shows that there might be complete homogeneity to complete heterogeneity, which provides an insight into how multi-lingual the geographical units are.

LDI values show that out of seven provinces, five provinces (Koshi, Madhesh, Bagmati, Lumbini, and Sudurpaschim) have considerably high LDI, indicating higher level of linguistic diversity (Figure 2). In contrast, two provinces (Karnali and Gandaki) have relatively lower value of LDI, indicating lower linguistic diversity. Koshi province (0.770) is the most diverse in language, followed by Sudurpaschim (0.757) and then by Madhesh (0.748). The least diverse province is Karnali (0.206) and then Gandaki (0.444).

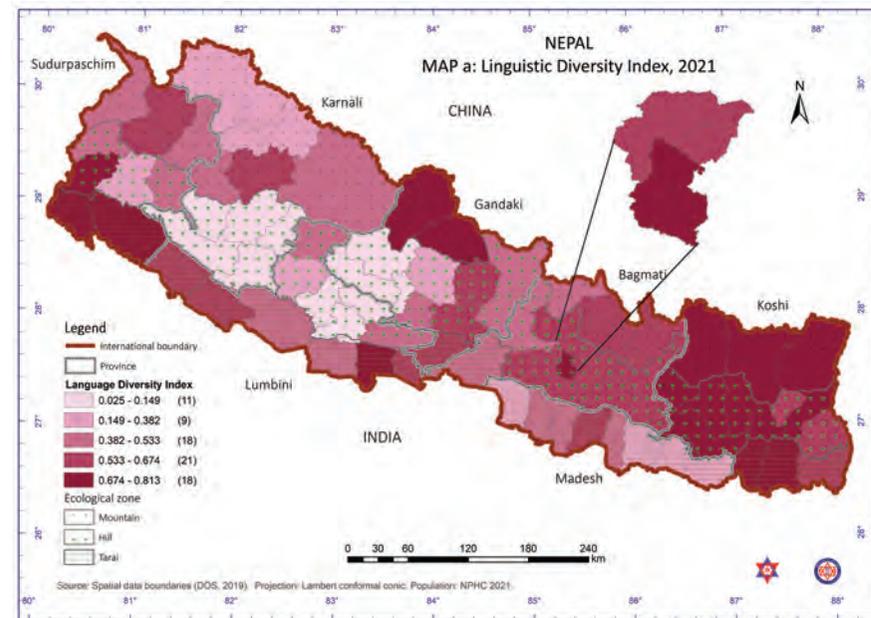

In case of the number of languages spoken, the highest number are spoken in Bagmati province (102), closely followed by Koshi (99). The number of languages spoken is far less in other provinces compared to these two provinces.

Linguistic diversity is considerably higher in the eastern part of the country (Map a & Table C). Out of 77 districts, 46 have LDI values of 0.500 and above. There are 16 districts with LDI values of 0.70 and above, of which 10 districts are from Koshi province. The remaining two are from Gandaki (Manang and Mustang), two from Sudurpaschim (Kailali and Kanchanpur), and one each from Bagmati and Lumbini. Among them, the highest level of linguistic diversity is in Solukhumbu (0.813), followed by Sunsari (0.790) and Manang (0.787).

There are 31 districts that have LDI values below 0.500, and they are mostly from the Madhesh, Gandaki, Lumbini, and Karnali provinces. Moreover, there are seven districts with LDI values even less than 0.100, which include Pyuthan, Gulmi, Dailekh, Arghakhanchi, Salyan, Rukum (West), and Jajarkot, mostly from the western part of the country, indicating that these are the most homogeneous districts in terms of language.

3.3 Current status of language families, 2021

The 2021 census recorded 124 language groups. Among them, 45 languages belong to Indo-European, 73 languages to Sino-Tibetan, three languages to Austro-Asiatic, and one to Dravidian family (Table D). The size of population extremely varies with language. There are only six languages that have speakers exceeding one million. Of these, five belong to the Indo-European family (Nepali, Maithili, Bhojpuri, Tharu, and Bajjika), and one belongs to the Sino-Tibetan family (Tamang). Nepali is in the first rank, which holds a share of 44.9 percent with 1.3 million speakers (Table D). Nepali is dominant to all other languages. Maithili is in the second position, closely following Nepali with 11 percent share. Other languages hold far less than 10 percent share of the population. There are 15 more language groups that have more than 100,000 and less than one million speakers. On the other hand, there are 23 groups that have less than 1,000 speakers; 16 groups with less than 500 speakers; and two groups (Bankariya and Kusunda) with less than 100 speakers, and they are the nearly extinct language groups.

The following sub-sections discuss the distribution of the 124 language groups according to 77 districts with tables (1 to 124) and 753 municipalities with maps (1 to 124) displayed in the atlas. Tables and maps are discussed by summarizing findings according to language family: Indo-European, Sino-Tibetan, Austro-Asiatic, and Dravidian.

3.2.1 Indo-European family

Indo-European is the largest language family in Nepal, with 45 languages being spoken by 83.1% of the total population. In 2021, Nepali and Tharu languages are spoken across all 77 districts. Nepali, being the lingua franca, is extensively used in daily communication, education, and administration. Notably, though both languages are spoken across all districts, Tharu is spoken only in 359 out of 753 palikas. More speakers are found at the palika level. Out of 45 Indo-European languages, 17 are spoken in less than 10 districts.

Each district shows a unique blend of languages. Nepali speakers are found with significant numbers in Kathmandu (1,246,821), Jhapa (613,495), and Rupandehi (477,665). The lowest Nepali speakers are found in Manang district (1,372). There are five gaunpalikas—Pachal Jharan (Kalikot), Tanjakot and Chankheli (Humla), Tribeni (Rolpa), and Soru (Mugu)—where only Nepali language is spoken. Similarly, Tharu speakers are found highly concentrated especially in the Tarai region, in the districts of Kailali (324,381), Bardiya (231,830), and Sunsari (107,409). The lowest number of Tharu speakers are found in Manang (19).

In contrast, languages like Maithili and Bhojpuri are predominantly spoken in the Madhesh province, indicating strong cultural and linguistic identities in these areas. These two languages are spoken in 75 districts. Maithili speakers are highest in Dhanusa (697,460), followed by Siraha (625,887) and Saptari (568,691). Similarly, Bhojpuri speakers are highest in Bara (63,664), followed by Parsa (54,375). Bhojpuri speakers are the least in Nijgadh municipality of Bara district and Thori gaunpalika of Parsa district. No Maithili speakers are recorded in Mugu and Rukum (East) and no Bhojpuri in Mugu and Bajhang.

There are also smaller linguistic groups, such as Doteli and Urdu, which are concentrated in specific districts, highlighting localized linguistic pockets. Doteli speakers are primarily confined in Doti (182,477) and Dadeldhura (52,694), while Urdu speakers are confined in Rautahat (80,974) and Mahottari (44,165). Moreover, at the local level, the highest number of Urdu speakers are in Harinagar gaunpalika (25,675) of Sunsari, Ishanath municipality (15,633) of Rautahat, and Samsi municipality (15,492) of Mahottari.

There are four languages under Indo-European family—Sadri, Sadhani, Kurmali, and Kisan—spoken only in three districts: Jhapa, Morang, and Banke. Sadri is spoken in Jhapa and Morang, Sadhani in Jhapa and Banke, Kurmali in Jhapa and Morang, and the Kisan is spoken only in Jhapa.

There are 1,173 English language speakers in Nepal in 2021, while there were 2,032 in 2011. English speakers are spread in 20 districts. Most of them are concentrated in metropolitan and sub-metropolitan cities and in some municipalities. Kathmandu has the highest number of English speakers (322), followed by Lalitpur (316) and Kaski (102). It is spoken in two gaunpalikas as well, namely Modi gaunpalika of Parbat and Badhiyatal gaunpalika of Baridya district.

3.2.2 Sino-Tibetan family

Sino-Tibetan is the second largest language family in Nepal, with 73 languages being spoken by 16.6 percent of the total population. It is almost five times smaller than Indo-European (83.1%). Magar Dhut is spoken across all 77 districts. The highest concentration is in Palpa with 82,538 speakers and lowest in Manang with 126. Tamang is spoken in 74 districts, except in three (Rukum East, Kalikot, and Baitadi). The highest number of Tamang speakers is recorded in Kathmandu (196,497) and lowest in Manang (178). Nepalbhasha (Newari) is spoken in 73 districts, and the largest proportion of speakers is concentrated in Kathmandu (307,802), and the smallest is found in Darchula (12). Notably, this language is not spoken in four districts: Rukum (East), Dolpa, Mugu, and Baitadi. Yakthung (Limbu) is spoken in 53 districts, which stands in the fourth position in the Sino-Tibetan family. The highest number of speakers of Yakthung is in Panchthar (72,871). Gurung is the fifth largest language group in the Sino-Tibetan family, speakers of which are most prevalent in Kaski (66,865). Gurung is spoken in 73 districts, more widespread than Yakthung.

There are three languages (Chum/Nubri, Nar-Phu, and Belhare) confined in two districts each. Chum/Nubri (4,280) is confined only in Chumanubri gaunpalika of Gorkha. Nar-Phu (423) is spoken almost only in Narpa Bhumi (344), Manang Ngisyang (19), and Chame (16) gaunpalikas of Manang. A smaller number of speakers of both Chum/Nubri and Nar-Phu reside in Kathmandu. Similarly, Belhare (152) speakers are mostly in Dhankuta, with a small representation in Doti.

There are six languages (Baragunwa, Dhuleli, Ichhurong Poike, Phangduwali, Suel and Bankariya) that are confined to only a single district each. Baragunwa (1,536) is spoken only in Gharpajhong gaunpalika (25) and Vargung Muktichhetra gaunpalika (1,332) of Mustang; Dhuleli (732) in Saipal gaunpalika of Bajhang; Ichhurong Poike (410) in Kaike gaunpalika of Dolpa; Phangduwali (228) in Pakhribas municipality of Dhankuta; Surel (136) in Gaurishankar gaunpalika of Dolkha; and Bankariya (61) in Manahari gaunpalika of Makwanpur.

3.2.3 Austro-Asiatic family

The Austro-Asiatic language family has only three language groups spoken in Nepal: Santhali, Munda/Mudiyari, and Khariya. These languages are predominantly concentrated in the Koshi province, particularly in Jhapa and Morang districts. For example, Santhali speakers are mostly from Jhapa and Morang; Khariya speakers are only in Jhapa and Morang; and Munda/Mudiyari are only in Jhapa, Morang, and Sunsari.

3.2.4 Dravidian family

Speakers of the Dravidian language family are predominantly concentrated in the Koshi province. This family includes Oraon/Kudukh, which is spread across 15 districts, including Jhapa, Morang, Sunsari, Udayapur, Siraha, Dhanusha, Sarlahi, Bara, Parsa, Kathmandu, and Lalitpur.

3.2.5 Others

In the “Others” category, Kusunda, sign language, others, and languages not stated are included. Kusunda is an isolated language that has only 23 speakers and thus is nearly extinct. Due to the low number of speakers, they are not shown in any map and table. This is because NSO provides data for only those that have 10 and above speakers. Data with less than 10 have been lumped with the “Other” category.
